

ABSTRACTHOUSING

The present invention relates to a housing, in particular a housing for an electronic device having at least two function sets. The housing has two housing portions that can rotate relative to one another to select different function sets. The housing preferably also has function modules corresponding to function sets, where the different relative positions of the housing portions select different function modules.

Figure 1